

Paul:

All through the paper I have tried to concentrate on rank and file workers~~x~~ correspondents who, from the rather narrow perspective of their respective factories, shops, etc., sent in reports to a CP or Communist-dominated trade union. I have considered the submission of detailed statistical or survey-type reports by trade union functionaries as outside the category of worker correspondent reporting^{as discussed here.} The latter is more limited in scope and probably less professional in character than reporting which can be done by a trade union officer ~~in~~ who, because of his trade union position, has access to more facts, figures, etc. The worker correspondent which the Communists apparently are trying to reach and to organize into networks (on the basis of my study of the subject) appear to be the "workers on the job" rather than trade union functionaries—who would automatically report to international and regional bureaus as part of their trade union job and especially if specifically requested to provide studies and survey reports by ~~the~~ trade union officials of higher rank.

I think that rather than extend the length of this paper and include that type of information here, it would be better to prepare a supplement or a second edition to the paper which was prepared about two years ago on the subject of "Intelligence Function of Mass Organizations". I have not looked into this thoroughly, but I feel there is enough additional data to make an interesting article^{or paper.} The letter Lourival VILLAR wrote to Marta Matamoros (CS-41097) would be ~~an~~ impressive ~~one~~ in such a paper. My impression is that there is quite a lot of other material of good quality which ~~may~~ could be used.
